

MASTER OF GOVERNANCE & PUBLIC POLICY

UQ's Master of Governance & Public Policy (MGPP) provides students with an advanced understanding of 21st century governance and public policy.

Graduates will be equipped with a transferable skill-set allowing them to succeed in a public or private sector career, where they will meaningfully address key policy issues and improve policy outcomes.

The MGPP program brings world-class scholars, policy practitioners and cutting-edge researchers together to deliver a first-class teaching experience.

As a student, you will work closely with leading researchers in the field, study and interact with public servants from a large range of different nations in a genuinely multi-cultural classroom experience, and access a range of public bodies at international, federal and state level through an acclaimed internship scheme and practitioner masterclasses.

Housed in the Graduate Centre in Governance and International Affairs within the School of Political Science and International Studies, the program aims to take the student experience to a new level and improve the quality and employability of graduates as future leaders – some of whom can be found in senior ministerial and public service positions around the world.

This is achieved through offering a suite of practical, skill-based courses which teach the foundations of contemporary governance and public policy.

A newly designed series of study areas include international policy, governance and development, designing social and community policy, and resource management.

There is also the opportunity for internships, research and independent study that allows you to tailor the program to your specific aspirations.
